

|            |                                                                  |
|------------|------------------------------------------------------------------|
| S_No_      | 79                                                               |
| Vernacular | तेदू (Bidi Leaf Tree)                                            |
| Scientific | Diospyros melanoxylon                                            |
| Family     | Ebenaceae                                                        |
| Remarks_   | बीड़ी बनाने के लिए पत्तों का उपयोग (Leaves used for bidi making) |
| Latitude   | 23.3573                                                          |
| Longitude  | 85.2464                                                          |
| Plant_Orig | Native                                                           |

Coromandal ebony

Diospyros melanoxylon Roxb.

F-Ebenaceae

Medium size to large size deciduous tree with dark brown bark with rectangular scales. Leaves are simple, alternate ovate in shape with entire margin, acute base, and obtuse apex. Flowers are pale yellow with four petals. Fruits are olive green initially turn golden colour when ripe. Fruits are edible dark brown, 4-6 seeds in single fruit. Locally known as Tendu or Kendu. It is naturally available in the forest. The leaves are used as fodder for cattle. They mainly used as wrapping around tobacco to make beedis in India